Most homes may soon get fast Internet

County studies proposals

Judge/executive Ken McFarland said the county is closer to approving a plan that will bring high-speed Internet access to nearly every home at last Thursday's Gallatin County Fiscal Court meeting.

"The City of Williamstown has a system that looks promising," said McFarland. "We are closely going over its specifications and will not agree to anything until we are sure this is the best plan for us. It wouldn't reach every home in the county but it would get to a lot of them."

Resident John Cain had another option for the court. Cain operates a company that already provides high-speed Internet access to some homes. He said if he could lease space on the county's antenna tower on Johnson Rd. for one of his antennas, he could provide Internet access to a majority of homes in the county at a reasonable price.

"My company is already up and running but I need to use space on your tower to reach more homes," Cain said. He also told the court he was fully insured and that his equipment would not interfere with the county's radio system in any way.

McFarland told Cain the court would consider his proposal once it received detailed specifications of how his system works. He said the county would also have to make sure none of its police, fire or EMS transmissions would be affected by Cain's equipment.

Glencoe woman jailed for attempted murder

A Glencoe woman has been arrested and charged with the attempted murder of her father, Owen County Sheriff Zemer Hammond.

Heather Hammond, 37, was taken into custody last Thursday, Oct. 11, by State Trooper Dave Roberts at her father's home in Corinth. State Police spokesman Trooper Brad Arterburn said Heather Hammond pointed a loaded gun at her father and pulled the trigger. The gun jammed, however, and Sheriff Hammond was not injured.

Gallatin teacher will hang up her skates

Michelle Cravens has taught language arts at Gallatin County middle school for five years. Her peers, administrators and students all agree she's a talented, personable and creative educator who is a pleasure to be around.

Although she excels in the classroom, the attractive, soft-spoken teacher also has a daring side that may surprise many who don't know her well.

At school she may be Mrs. Cravens but once she puts on her roller skates, she's known as Smashin' Punkin', a hard charging jammer for the Black-n-Bluegrass Rollergirls roller derby team.

"I've been skating most of my life but I tried out and joined the team five years ago," Cravens said at the middle school on Monday. "It's a fast-moving sport that's physically demanding and somewhat violent but it's challenging and fun too. I've seen broken bones and bad cuts but luckily I've never been seriously injured. Roller Derby isn't theatrical like it used to be back in the '70s when it looked like professional wrestling. Today, it's totally legitimate and growing increasingly popular."

Cravens, who has one masters degree and is working on another, has decided to hang up her skates after this Saturday's "bout" at The Bank of Kentucky Center on the NKU Campus. Saturday's event begins at 11 a.m. and is a tournament with four teams that lasts all day.

The Gallatin County teacher is retiring to devote more time to furthering her education and to care for her many animals. She and her husband have a horse, five pigs, a goat and three dogs at their Walton home. She also works as a volunteer at the Kenton County Animal Shelter and is the subject of a feature story in this month's edition of Modern Dog magazine.

Today, roller derby is skated on a flat track at lightning speed. Races are called "Jams" and only one player, the jammer, on each team can score points. The other four skaters on a team are blockers. Jammers, such as Cravens, wear a star on their helmets and score by passing skaters on the other team.

"Many blockers are big and strong like linemen on a football team," explained Cravens. "Jammers like me are smaller and faster and sometimes we get knocked around pretty good."

Cravens said there are many rules that are strictly enforced to protect the skaters. The team doesn't pay its skaters but some members such as Cravens have sponsors. She's sponsored by Triple Crown Crossfit, which pays for many of her expenses.

"Mrs. Cravens is one of our best teachers and we're fortunate to have her here," said middle school principal Curt Bieger. "She works hard to make sure her students excel in her classroom. That's her main focus."

"She's great," said middle school honor student and student council member C. J. Sadler. "She is an excellent teacher and we all like her very much. She also sponsors the student council and helps us a lot with that."

"I love to teach and feel honored to be able to do it," Cravens said. "Middle school is such an important, exciting and fun age. We are now reading and writing our own suspense stories for Halloween and everyone, including me, is enjoying the exercise."

This will be a busy weekend for Cravens. Besides skating in her final event on Saturday, she'll be at the Barnes and Noble bookstore at Newport on the Levee on Friday evening to autograph copies of this month's Modern Dog magazine.

Amos is worried about a fence

This and That

By Kelley Warnick
Editor

I took advantage of Saturday's wonderful weather by hopping on my motorcycle. I wanted to ride over to see my old friend, Amos, who lives on top of a high ridge that overlooks the mighty Ohio River.

After climbing the long, gravel driveway that leads to Amos's modest farmhouse, I brought the bike to a stop at his back door. I turned off the motor, took off my helmet and walked inside.

I found my friend drinking coffee at his kitchen table. As usual, he was surrounded by a mountain of books, newspapers and magazines. Amos doesn't have many hobbies. He doesn't watch TV, or own a computer and he only turns on his radio when he fears a storm is coming. He spends all his free time reading and most of what he reads about, he worries about.

As I sat down across from him, I couldn't help but notice Amos looked melancholy. I assumed he was upset over the historical collapse of his beloved Cincinnati Reds in the playoffs. He quickly set me straight.

"By now, I'm used to the Reds breaking my heart," Amos said. "I'll be fine by the time spring training rolls around. I'm much more concerned about what's going on along the border that separates Gallatin and Carroll counties."

I wasn't sure what Amos was talking about but he quickly explained.

"Have you seen that eye-sore of a chain link fence that stretches as far as the eye can see?" Amos asked. "It looks like someone is building a concentration camp over there. Who thinks such a scar across the land is a good idea?"

I understood what was on his mind. I told him the electric company put up that fence to protect a very long conveyor belt system it's constructing. When finished the conveyor belt will carry fly ash from its generating plant on the river to a storage area far away. I also told him the company purchased hundreds of acres of farmland for its project and wrote checks for millions of dollars to landowners who had to relocate."

"It's still sad," Amos said. "I hate to see all that farmland destroyed. That used to be one of the most beautiful spots in the county. I can't believe it's now going to be one big dumping area."

I told Amos fly ash could be toxic and the electric company wanted to store it as safely as possible. That means it needs to get it away from the river. I also pointed out the electric company has agreed to protect wetland areas in the county in exchange for the acreage it's using for its conveyor belt and dumping area.

"I suppose that makes sense but that unsightly metal fence still upsets me," Amos said. "It just doesn't seem right."

I told him to look on the bright side. As long as Gallatin County has a fence stretching across its border, it doesn't have to worry about a bunch of alien spacemen invading from the west.

For Halloween Season — 'The Floating Head'

By Frances Bayes

As a young girl, I usually spent a week or two in the summer with my aunt and uncle who had two daughters close to my age.

My aunt lived in a mining town in Kentucky. At one time, the house they lived in was a boarding house for coal miners who were known for drinking, gambling and a murder or two.

My oldest brother, Hubert, lived with my Aunt M and Uncle B and worked in the coal mines. Now Uncle B and Hubert were not above going out and having a few drinks, which is what happened the night the ghost appeared.

Everyone was in bed, sound asleep, on this particular night. And keep in mind this house was big and lonesome and could be scary after dark, as several rooms were empty.

We all slept downstairs except for Hubert. But on this night, because my uncle had a few too many drinks, my aunt insisted he take himself upstairs to sleep with Hubert, which he did.

I'm a sound sleeper but in the middle of the night, I was awakened by a terrifying scream! My two cousins and I ran out of our bedrooms and into the hallway that led upstairs.

There, coming down the stairs, was my uncle carrying my brother in his arms. My brother was not a little child, but an adult. The look my uncle had on his face would have frightened anyone.

Uncle B's story was that he had wakened and realized that someone was pulling the blanket off him and as fast as he could pull it back on, off it would go again. Thinking that it was Hubert, he tried to wake him to tell him to stop. Knowing that Hubert was a sound sleeper, my uncle finally gave up and decided to come downstairs to sleep.

Before he got out of bed, he turned on the light. Then, all of a sudden, he looked up and saw it — a head floating in the air!

He was so scared he couldn't speak. All he could do was shake Hubert, but this was a waste of time, so he picked him up and carried him downstairs out of that room.

When Uncle B got through telling us what had happened, we had a good laugh and went back to bed. We all thought he'd had a bad dream after a bad night.

The next morning, Hubert asked if we would help move his things downstairs because he was not going to spend another night in that room. So, laughing to ourselves, my Aunt M, my two cousins and I went upstairs to help out.

When we walked into that room, there on the floor, was blood - drops of blood all around the bed. Fresh blood.

As you might well imagine, the upstairs was never used again and Uncle B and Aunt M soon started looking for another house — one without an upstairs.

Kentucky Commentary

Unfunded pensions will bankrupt the Bluegrass

By Jim Waters

Do Kentucky's political leaders continue to kick the unfunded-pensions can down the road because they're counting on a bailout from the federal government?

Why wouldn't they?

If private companies like General Motors are too big to fail, then what's to keep states like Kentucky with huge pension liabilities from seeking their own green gravy from Washington?

It must have made the hearts of Gov. Steve Beshear and his political pals in Frankfort leap with relief when they heard Illinois Gov. Pat Quinn recently run the idea of a federal bailout for his state's $167 billion pension liability up the political flagpole.

For years – particularly when economic times were good – Kentucky's politicians padded pension and health-care benefits as a way to curry political favor. The bloated system now has 1,701 different entities, along with thousands of employees, connected to our state government's pension system.

The story of failing pension funds has been repeated nationwide. States now face a combined total of $2.5 trillion in unfunded pension costs, including Kentucky's $34 billion liability.

Giving such funding power to cowardly politicians in the first place was like giving car keys and whiskey to teenage boys. An ensuing crash is inevitable, and a bailout would only encourage this disastrous behavior.

Bailing out these states would be like repeating that process all over again – even after experiencing such disastrous consequences. Besides, do we really want the federal government adding to its already mountainous debt with such bailouts?

As the Wall Street Journal recently noted, federal bailouts of state pension funds "end up pitting states against each other."

Why should hardworking taxpayers in Washington state – whose pension system at 95 percent funded is the nation's healthiest – be forced to subsidize the abuse of Kentucky's pension system, which has left the commonwealth's workers' retirement funding level at barely 30 percent?

This becomes an even bigger question when you realize there has been little interest in ramping down spending by Gov. Beshear's administration. A new Cato Institute report ranking America's governors gives Beshear a "D" for his economic performance, citing "his proposed substantial spending increases in recent years."

To continue proposing "substantial spending increases" even as the state's pension hole sinks deeper and deeper is the height of fiscal irresponsibility.

Even worse, the politically cozy retirement-board members have hastened the wreck by using accounting maneuvers to offer a rosier picture of Kentucky's public pension situation than reality dictates.

By guaranteeing the retirement plans a 7.75 percent return on investment, the state makes the unfunded liability even worse.

It's like deciding your bank account will reap a 6 percent return, writing checks on those expected funds, and then wanting the bank to cover the difference when the yields are only half that much.

The Wall Street Journal compared the federal-bailout idea to "the GM strategy" employed by labor unions during the automaker's near-demise: "Never make a concession at the state level, figuring that if things get really bad, the federal government will have no political choice but to bail out the pensions if not the entire state."

As long as Frankfort's politicians can enjoy the political benefits of treating their bloated pension benefits as an "inviolable contract", little incentive will exist to change. And the current administration will drag the commonwealth ever closer to insolvency.

What is the average diameter of the eye of a hurricane? ?

Answer: 14 miles.

Weather History

Oct. 17, 1781 - General Cornwallis attempted to escape encirclement by crossing York River, "but a violent storm arose." The storm dispersed the general's boats, causing him to ask for an armistice.

Williamson leads runners at Owen

Mark Gray

The boys cross country team ran in the conference meet at Owen County on Tuesday, October 9.

Coty Williamson was Gallatin's top runner with a 24th place finish and a time of 21:27 on the 3.1 mile course.

He was followed by Trent Wainscott (29, 22:43), Chris Wilson, (31, 23:23), and Oleg Poyan (34, 25:53).

Walton-Verona beat out Trimble County for the team title.

Gallatin's next race will be at the regional meet at Danville on November 3.

Perkins and Ackermanns honored as seasons end

Mark Gray
Sports Reporter

The season ended for both the volleyball and soccer teams last Tuesday when they were eliminated in district tournament action.

Volleyball

The volleyball team fell to Eminence by a score of 25-13, 25-9, 25-13 at Carroll County High School. Katrina Perkins was the Lady Wildcat representative on the All Tournament Team.

Soccer

The soccer team was knocked out by host Owen County, 4-1. Luke and Eli Ackermann were named to the All Tournament Team.

Sports in Kentucky

by Bob Watkins

Western Kentucky will host Louisiana-Monroe for the Hilltoppers homecoming on Saturday. Western has won five of six and four in a row, the Warhawks (4-2) average 42-plus points a game.

A Western Kentucky win would catapult the Hilltoppers into, ready for this, post-season bowl consideration.

I hope ESPN schedulers recognize this could be a Barnum-and-Bailey show.

Following, six nights later (Friday, Oct. 26 on ESPN), unbeaten and 14th ranked Louisville hosts No. 18 Cincinnati (5-0) at Papa John's Stadium.

A Louisville win could push Charlie Strong's Cardinals a major bowl contender.

No downside to this lineup, right? Wrong.

More exposure for UofL and WKU means hotter pursuit of coaches Willie Taggart and Charlie Strong by football factories like Arkansas, Tennessee and others when the Coach Carousel opens for business after Thanksgiving.

UK Football

Joker Phillips took his beleaguered team to Fayetteville last week. The clock said 5:08 (in the third quarter) when a lightning storm put an end to a 49-7 Arkansas shelling of hapless Kentucky.

Hoops

Big Blue Madness packed Rupp Arena last week. Highlights, lowlights?

HIGH. Court lighting. Gorgeous.

HIGH. Inclusion and introduction of players from past NCAA championship teams.

LOW. Wah Wah Jones, bless him, should have been introduced for applause, but the once 6-4, 220-pound All-American should not have been trotted out to center court.

Gallatin teacher will hang up her roller derby skates

Gallatin County eighth grade language arts teacher Michelle Cravens is a woman with many interests. Besides being a valued teacher at the school, she's an animal lover and volunteers at the Kenton County animal shelter.

She also has been a standout skater for the Black-n-Bluegrass Rollergirls roller derby team. She has decided to retire from competitive after this Saturday's match at The Bank of Kentucky Center at NKU.

Here's what some of our friends have been doing this past week or so, along with the continuing saga of our Alaskan travelers:

• The Bradleys' and Meyungs' route to Alaska took them through the Canadian Rockies where they saw numerous mountains over 7,000 feet still retaining snow on the tops. The melting snow coming down the mountains makes impressive waterfalls. They also discovered they were in the north area where there were 21 hours of daylight! They arrived in the town of Whitehorse, located on the Yukon River, just in time to go to the Ford dealer for some needed mechanical adjustments and parts, and were stranded until the parts could be flown in by float plane. However, the foursome didn't let that slow them down—they rented a car and were able to tour the area. They saw the world's longest fish ladder, used by salmon to by-pass the dam and go up the Yukon River to spawn. More on this fascinating journey next week.

• Mary Carabella and friend, Scott Crawley, of Louisville, were guests of Bob, Alex and Laura Weldon on Saturday night. All enjoyed playing pool and catching up with one another's news.

• Diane Young had a fun week with good friends and family. She enjoyed a surprise visit from Charlie Baker, who entertained them all with stories and singing. During the week, Diane and family were glad to see her mother and brother. They spent some time with them, shopping, and had lunch with her mother-in-law, Charlotte. Diane's friend, Lori, also came to play cards with Diane and her mother. Sunday evening, Diane and husband, Ron, hosted a nice supper at her home with all their children and grandchildren, as well as friend, Lori.

• Amy and Greg Dickerson, with their children, Hayden and Brian Dickerson and Julia Riesenberg, attended Big Blue Madness in Lexington's Rupp Arena, Friday evening. She said they had a great time, and particularly enjoyed seeing coach, Matthew Mitchell, dancing like M.C. Hammer with the cheerleaders. On Sunday, Amy and Hayden met Amy's sister, Ashley Wartman, at Steak and Shake in Florence where they had lunch. Afterwards, they browsed through the Antique Mall all afternoon. Amy found some of her favorite dishware to add to her collection.

• Alice and Ron Johnson attended a Halloween party hosted by her daughter and son-in-law, Angela and Greg Mitchell for their children, Hannah, Rebekah, and Avah Mitchell. There were about 90 people in attendance to enjoy the games, hayrides, and a mountain of good food. The children were in costume for the four-hour event and all had a wonderful time.

• Boyd Lionberger has just returned from a week of visiting family members in Greeley, Colorado. He left Warsaw on October 2, arriving at his brother Dick's home in Greeley at 10 p.m. that night. Wednesday morning, they met with his two other brothers, John and Lowell, and went to breakfast before going to Red Feather Lakes for a day of fishing. When asked if they caught anything, Boyd said they had enough for supper in about forty minutes! On Thursday, the brothers visited their younger sister, Carol Jean Horner in Sterling, Colorado, and enjoyed a nice lunch at the Country Kitchen, where Carol's husband, John, joined them. They spent the afternoon being entertained by John, who has a band called Prairie Pickers. John played for them while Carol did the singing. On Friday, the brothers attended the Model Railroad Museum in Greeley, and Saturday found them at the local granary where Boyd purchased 50 pounds of Pinto beans and sent them home by FedEx. Nobody will be hungry at the Lionberger's home this winter! Boyd and his brothers went to church on Sunday at St. Paul's Congregational Church where his nephew, Bob Lindschmidt, is the pastor. Following the service, the brothers picked up their sister, Betty Lindschmidt and all enjoyed lunch at a Mexican restaurant in Windsor, Colorado. On Monday, Boyd said he spent most of the day washing his clothes and packing to head home the following day. Boyd's wife, Betty, said the only memorable thing she did last week was pick Boyd up at the airport at 2 a.m., accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Carol West.

• For all of you who were wondering what was going on at my house yesterday, here it is: Once again, a large limb fell on my electric and cable wires, bringing them to the ground and dislodging them from the house. Thanks to the nice gentleman from the electric company and electrician, Brian Richards, I was able to have it repaired and at least had power Sunday evening. Nevertheless, the cable company could not do their repairs till Monday, so I spent Sunday night without phone, cable, or internet service and didn't know what to do with myself!

• So many folks have asked about Annie, as I didn't mention her last week. She is doing great, happy and bouncy as puppies generally are. She loved having the repairmen at the house on Sunday and Monday, totally convinced they had come just to visit with her. They all picked her up for a cuddle, and she whined after them when they left.

Happy Birthday, Sarah Rose Hurd!

Planting Bulbs this Fall

Fall is the time to think about all those flowers we associate with spring: daffodils, crocus, hyacinths, and other easy-to-grow flowering bulbs. If you aren't growing any spring-flowering bulbs in your landscape, you are missing out on some easy-to-grow plants that provide early color to your garden.

These bulbs are planted in fall because it corresponds to the end of their natural dormancy. Most of these plants begin root growth in fall, followed by a cool stratification period necessary for proper flower development and then shoot growth in late winter and early spring.

No matter which bulbs you select, remember that the largest bulbs will produce the greatest show next spring. However, smaller bulbs will still produce some flowers, and these may be the best choice for mass planting or naturalizing. Avoid any bulbs that feel lightweight as these may have severely dried during storage.

It's important to plant flowering bulbs at the proper depth, so inquire about plant depth at the nursery or follow the label directions. Most bulbs do not need fertilization until growth emerges in the spring. When you see plants emerging, apply 1 to 2 pounds per 100 square feet of a complete fertilizer (like 10-10-10).

Once flowering occurs, remove the faded blooms, but don't remove the foliage. The leaves produce sugars and other compounds necessary for the bulb to overwinter and bloom again the next spring. Most bulbs will enter dormancy in late spring or early summer and will renew growth, starting with the root system in the fall.

Fun Opportunities in Gallatin County

The Extension Homemakers Tasting Bee will be held this Friday, October 19th, 11 a.m. – 1 p.m. at the Extension Office.

This scholarship fundraiser event is the ninth one held by Extension Homemaker's here in Gallatin County. Tickets are available for a $5 donation at Beringer Drug Center (see Mayme), through Extension Homemaker members and at the UK Extension Office (395 U.S. 42 West, Warsaw). Plan to attend and visit with your neighbors!

On Tuesday, October 23rd from 10 a.m.—Noon come to a session titled "Bountiful Beans" at your UK Extension Office, 395 U.S. 42 West, Warsaw, where you will discover bean cooking tips, nutritional facts, and several recipes. Call 567-5481 to pre-register.

If someone told you that there was something that you could do to prevent heart disease and diabetes, make you feel better and have more energy, and even improve the mind, would you do it? That something is exercise. Of course there is one catch – you have to start moving and keep moving.

There are many ways to keep your body moving on a day-to-day basis. There is biking, walking, sports, running and even household chores.

Doing some sort of activity everyday allows the body to keep moving and as we age, allows for you to stay independent longer.

If you have not been doing any type of physical activity, it is important to pay a visit to your doctor. Certain people may have higher risks for certain exercises such as those with major health risks, including males over the age of 45. You should talk to your doctor about what you would like to do.

After you have been cleared by the doctor, make sure to start slow. Often, when starting a new activity, people do too much at first. This can possibly cause injury.

Being a little sore after participating in physical activity is ok, but if you are sore three days later then you probably pushed yourself a little too hard.

Starting physical activity can be intimidating, but if you start slow it can be very rewarding.

A good place to start is right here in Gallatin County. Every Monday-Wednesday-Friday at 11 a.m., the "Keep Moving" group meets at your U.K. Extension Office in Warsaw. A lot of the flexibility movements are done while sitting in a chair. Call the office at 567-5481 to learn more.

Zumba is an aerobic workout done to Latin music. This group is meeting every Monday and Wednesday at 6:00 PM at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Warsaw. Contact the Extension Office at 567-5481.

KY Saves, Piggy Bank Contest

Saving money is important no matter your age, especially with an economy that is much like a roller coaster. Kentucky youth can learn the importance of saving money by participating in the Piggy Bank Design Contest.

The contest is a way for the youth of Kentucky to display their creative skills to their county and potentially the state, while becoming more aware of how to build wealth and reduce debt. The Piggy Bank Design Contest is the youth component of Kentucky Saves. Kentucky Saves Week begins Feb. 24 and ends March 2.

Contestants will begin the competition at the district level, where a panel of judges will pick the top two entries from the extension district.

Judges will choose the two winners based on originality, creativity, artistic design and attractiveness. The winning piggy banks from each district will have their design put on display in February at the state Capitol rotunda in Frankfort.

As a new addition this year, all 14 district winners will receive a $250 scholarship from the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority and the Kentucky Education Savings Plan Trust. These scholarships will be awarded in the form of a KESPT college savings account. The Piggy Banks can also be entered in the Gallatin County Fair.

The deadline for entries is December 3rd. Youth wishing to enter the contest must be kindergarten through 12th-grade students at any Kentucky public, private or home school.

To receive an entry form and contest rules concerning the Kentucky Saves' Piggy Bank Contest visit http://www.uky.ag/moneywise or contact the Gallatin County Cooperative Extension Service. More information about the Kentucky Education Saving Plan Trust can be found at http:///www.kysaves.com.

Fall Wildlife Conservation Fair will be held at Shaker Village in Pleasant Hill October 27th

Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill and the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources are pleased to present the Fall Wildlife Conservation Fair- Bobwhite, Bird Dogs & Native Habitats on Saturday, Oct. 27.

This free event is a fall celebration of the Kentucky outdoors and is filled with fantastic fall foliage, family hikes and kids' nature programs. Guests can watch the bird dog parade and then test their shot at the laser target booth. Visitors can meet Shaker Village's conservation partners and learn about efforts to restore Kentucky's bobwhite quail population and other wildlife.

"This event is about education and awareness. Since we converted parts of the property to native warm season grasses and wildflowers, our wildlife management program has resulted in an explosion of northern bobwhite quail," said Shaker Village Property Manager Don Pelly. "Our Nature Preserve is a true success story that has become a national model for wildlife management. And continued partnerships with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, the Natural Resources and Conservation Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Quail Unlimited will help ensure the success of this project for years to come."

Ben Robinson, small game biologist at Kentucky Fish and Wildlife, said the Fall Wildlife Conservation Fair will showcase the outcome of these strong partnerships. "The ongoing quail and grassland habitat restoration project at the Nature Preserve at Shaker Village is one of the most successful projects in the entire southeast," he noted. "Prior to this, we had an estimated six to 10 wild coveys of quail. Today, there are nearly 60. Each covey averages 12-15 quail."

Demonstrations and talks will be held throughout the day, including How to Build Your Backyard Native Habitat and Habitat Management Through Prescribed Burns.

Over the past three years, Shaker Village has restored more than 1,000 acres of native prairie grasses, enhancing the Nature Preserve's biodiversity and providing unique wildlife habitats, while returning the land to its natural beauty.

New Owen County boat ramp will be built on Kentucky River

Local legislators and county officials will join employees of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources in announcing construction of a new public boat ramp on the Kentucky River at Gratz in Owen County. The ceremony will begin at 1:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 22.

"We expect final permit approvals within the next few months and hope to begin actual ramp construction this winter," said Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commissioner Jon Gassett. "This new boat launch ramp will provide recreational opportunity and much needed public access to this pool of the river."

The ramp project is the result of a working partnership between the city of Gratz, Owen County Fiscal Court and Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. Plans call for a 14-foot-wide ramp and a parking lot to accommodate up to 15 trucks with trailers.

The city of Gratz donated part of the land for the ramp site and the remainder was acquired from willing sellers. Seventy-five percent of the approximate $100,000 construction cost will be covered by federal Sport Fish Restoration monies. Owen County Fiscal Court will supply general maintenance.

The ceremony will take place near the intersection of Main and Harlan streets in Gratz, not far from the site of the old bridge that was removed nearly two years ago.
